The products shipped pursuant to the above referenced order number were manufactured in accordance with and conform to our manufacturing specifications and the documents (if any) referenced below from the date of receipt and for the period (if any) stated in the specification. Estimated usable life (EUL) in the table below is the time from the useable life date (ULD) that the product can reasonably be expected to conform with the manufacturing specifications and assumes the user has properly stored the product below 80°F and 60% R.H. The actual usable life of the product is dependent upon the storage conditions under which the product is stored and user's particular application for the product. User is responsible for determining whether the product is fit for user's particular purpose and suitable for its method of production.

The items shipped were:
